Most Sembiran villagers are farmers. They mostly cultivate cocoa, clove, and coffee. They also breed cows, goats, pigs and chickens. There are no tourism facilities in this village which enable the inhabitants to earn a living in tourism sector. Many families rely on financial support from their family members who work outside the village or outside the island of Bali (Riemenschneider & Schaublin, 2006, p. 7). It shows that the Sembiran villagers also try to increase their prosperity by finding jobs outside the village or the island.

However, Sembiran today has become increasingly a progressive community due to the increasing contact with outsiders. Its habitants are ready to adopt and integrate innovations. Modernity influences many aspects in their lives, including their life styles and also their language. In terms of life styles, some teenagers and adults of Sembiran are able to use gadget and access the internet, and some of them also have social media accounts. It automatically influences their language since they tend to use Dataran Balinese when talking to people out of their group. Although the young people of Sembiran village are able to speak Dataran Balinese, the demand of using Dataran Balinese in their daily life only emerges if there are visits from non-Sembiran people (Riemenschneider & Schaublin, 2006, pp. 7-9).

Traditional life such as local traditions, rituals and ceremonies are still run by Sembiran villagers although technological advances have been spreading to the village. Arts and customs are still preserved in this village until now. Sacred dances are still performed in certain ceremonies both in family and community context, such as Rejang Sembiran, Baris Dadap, Baris Presi and Baris Jojor. The dances are performed only on special days by selected groups of people. Another unique characteristic of Sembiran is their old houses, which still can be found in the village. There are also many historical heritages in this village that are believed to be more than 2, 000 years old. 17 out of 20 temples have a number of Megalithic relics, as can be seen in the following pictures.

Recent changes in the community life in Sembiran reflects the socio-cultural dynamics of contemporary Sembiran. This is of particular interest in the paper, which is further discussed in the ensuing sections in this paper in the context of the dynamics of ethnolinguistic vitality of Sembiran Balinese. Ethnolinguistic vitality is defined as the ability “which makes a group likely to behave as a distinctive and collective entity within the intergroup setting” (Giles et al. 1977, p. 308). It involves continuing intergenerational transmission of group’s language (i.e. linguistic vitality; cf. Pauwels 2016, p. 37) and cultural practices, sustainable demography and active social institutions, social cohesion, and emotional attachment to its collective identity.
