REVIEW OF RELATED LITERATURE, CONCEPTS AND THEORIES

2.1 Review of Related Literature

In this section, the researcher will present several previous studies related to this research. The researcher presents three studies from other researchers. Previous research on song lyrics was conducted.

The first is this research by Pradana (2018) in a thesis entitled "An Analysis of Figurative Language in Celine Dion's Song" from the Department of English Education, Faculty of Tarbiyah and Tinggi Teacher Training, Ponogoro. In this study, the focus is on analyzing the types of figurative language contained in song lyrics. This study uses qualitative and descriptive research. In his study, he used the theory found by Aziz (2011). Then he found six types of figurative language in his analysis namely: hyperbole, symbols, simile, metaphor, imagery, and irony.

The similarity between Pradana's research and this research is that both studies analyze the types of figurative language found in song lyrics. The difference between the research from Perdana and this research is the theory. In the research to find the types of figurative language, Pradana's research used the theory by Abrams (1971), while in this research, Knickerbocker and Reninger's (1963) theories are used to identify the types of figurative language found in the song by Melanie Martinez.

The second study was written by Hariyanto (2017) in an article entitled "Figurative language used in One Direction". This study focuses on the types of figurative language used in One Direction's songs and the meaning of the figurative language. Then it can support the study of figurative language found in the songs of One Direction. The author uses Perrine's theory to analyze and classify the collected data according to the types of figurative language found in journals or theses. The result of this research is that the writer found 4 types of figurative language namely: simile, metaphor, personification, and hyperbole. The most dominant figurative language used is a metaphor based on tabulation results. The similarities between the article written by Hariyanto and this research are the problems in the research. The difference lies in the data source.

The third study is written by Apriono (2017) in an Article entitled "An Analysis of Figurative Language Used in The Lyrics of The Song Breakout by Miley Cyrus". The objectives of this study are (1) identify the types of figurative language used in the song lyrics of the Taylor Swift breakout album (2) uses the types of figurative language used in the lyrics of the song Breakout by Miley Cyrus (3) using contributions from using Miley Cyrus album. They used qualitative and descriptive methods to analyze the data using Carles (1998) theory to analyze figurative language. From the results of their research, they were able to find the figurative language used in the lyrics of the song Miley Cyrus Breakout, namely: Hyperbole and Metaphor. The most common figurative language in album 2 is the lyrics in the song Miley Cyrus Hyperbole which appears in line 2 of the song lyrics and connects 83.33 %. This study shows that the writer conveys a message about being tamed which shows excess used to evoke strong feelings.

The hyperbole language in the lyrics of the song conveys the deepest ego. The similarity of Apriono's research in this study is that both studies used song lyrics as a data source. The difference between these studies is the theory and data sources. The data source for Aprilono was taken from the album Miley Cyrus, while the data source for this study was taken from the lyrics of the song "Portals" by Melanie Martinez . Which shows exaggeration used to evoke strong feelings.

The fourth research is conducted by Pasaribu (2018), in a thesis entitled "A Cognitive Linguistic Analysis of Indonesian Love Metaphor". In his research, he analyzes Indonesian love emotions, which are expressed metaphorically, and investigates the source domain, which is projected onto the target domain of love. The difference between Pasaribu's research with the research under study is the research subject. The subject of this research focuses on the lyrics of the song by Melanie Martinez while Pasaribu's research focuses on the perception of metaphor in society to express the word love.

This study is based on the explanation above to help research questions related to conceptual metaphors that convey love. This study used the conceptual metaphor theory of Lakoff and Johnson (1980). The theory was used to understand mapping metaphorical conceptual used to convey his love in the song lyrics by Melanie Martinez. Besides that, the theory of emotional metaphor by Kovances (1986) is used to help research to analyze conceptual metaphors because this study analyzed conceptual metaphors to convey the love found in the lyrics of the song.

The fifth research is an article by Pradipta (2017) entitled "An Analysis of Hyperbole Expressions as Revealing Sense of Depression in Song Lyrics Evanescence's Album Fallen". The result of the previous research is that the writer found that the types of figures of speech that can be found, in the song lyrics of the evanescence's Album Fallen are hyperbole. In hyperbole, the artist can express figurative language about deep feelings of sadness and depression by using the word hyperbole because, in hyperbolic expression, the artist can exaggerate his innermost feelings, and he can share what he feels with the listener.

This article discusses the hyperbole figurative language used in Evanescence's song lyrics and also finds the types of figurative language and find the meaning of hyperbolic language in the song. To analyze the data, the theory used in this thesis is the theory of the native language discovered by Perrine (1992) and the theory of meaning discovered by Leech (1981). This thesis uses qualitative methods to provide a clearer picture of the problems identified from the description above. There are similarities between the previous study and this study. Both studies analyze figurative language and also used the same theory from Perrine (1992) and the theory of meaning discovered by Leech (1981). While the difference from this research is the previous research only focused on analyzing one type of figurative language, namely hyperbole. However, the current research focuses on several types of figurative language according to the theory that the writer will use. In addition, Pradipta in the data source taken from Evanescence's song, which is on the album Some One You Love, while the data of this study was taken from the lyrics of Melanie Martinez's song on the album "PORTALS".

2.2 Concepts

Concept is an explanation of the term that refers to the title. In addition, the concept also explanation defines the term that is relevant in the thesis and the terms are often used in research. In this part also explain about the key words contained in the thesis. There are three elements that are relevant in this study are figurative language, song lyrics and Melanie Martinez. In this chapter the writer will explain the definition of figurative language and song lyrics.

Theory by Perrine (1992) explains about analyzing the types of figurative language contained in the song lyrics "PORTALS," namely: Simile, Personification, Hyperbole Metaphor, Irony, Imagery, Symbols.

And theory by Leech (1981) explained about analyzing the meaning of figurative language contained in the song lyrics in the album "PORTALS".

2.3.1 Types of Figurative Language

The meaning of figurative language is language which employs various figures of speech on kind of language which departs from the language employed in the traditional literal ways of describing person or object. According to Perrine (1992), there are 7 types of figurative language.

1. Simile

A simile is a figure of speech that compares one thing with another by using a conjunction or a word of comparison. According to Prawiro (2019), a simile is a figure of speech that uses an explicit or direct comparison to compare something that is being compared with is comparison by using the words "like" or "as".

2. Personification

Personification figure of speech is one of figurative language which creates simile of inanimate object with human like characteristics. According to Arp and Johnson (2010), personification figure of speech is a kind of figures of speech which describes inanimate or inanimate object so that their properties or as if they are like humanity.

3. Hyperbole

Hyperbole is a figure of speech in which something is expressed in an exaggerated manner (exaggeration) with the aim of emphasizing the information in the sentence. According to James (1974), hyperbole is a style of language that contains exaggerated statements or their nature with the intention of emphasizing a statement or situation to intensify increase the impression and influence.

4. Metaphor

Metaphor is a style of language that uses comparative words to represent other things that actually want to be expressed. Comparisons that can be used start from comparisons of physical object, properties, idea, or other actions. According to Listiani (2011), says that metaphor is the uses of words without a real meaning but rather as an image based on similarities or comparisons.

5. Irony

Irony is a style of language that uses a different meaning from the actual meaning intended. According to the definition, irony is figure of speech that contains a hidden meaning through an explicit way. This means that the hidden meaning is conveyed through things that are clearly different even the opposite of the actual meaning.

6. Imagery

Imagery is the formation of a mental representation of an object, place, event or situation that is perceived through the senses, when imagining individuals can imagine seeing something. According to Fitria (2012), imagery is a series of activities that are imagined as experiences that mimic real experiences, where we consciously shape and see and can involve our senses.

7. Symbols

Symbol is a sign or symbol that represents object on the map. According to Knickerbocker and Reninger (1974), symbols is a picture of reality a sign that is seen or inhaled by something that replaces an idea or object.

2.3.2 Theory of Meaning

The meaning can be defined as all that is communicated by language. The study of meaning is also called semantics. According to Leech (1981), semantics is central to the study of communication and as communication becomes a more important factor in social organization, the need to understand it is increasing. Semantics is also the center of the human thought process cognition and conceptualization. All that exists is intricately bound up with the way we classify and convey our everyday experiences of the world through language. Its narrow semantics interpretation limits the study of the conceptual system of language.

According to Leech (1981), there are five kinds of meanings:

1. Conceptual Meaning

Conceptual meaning is a logical definition of a word based on word structure and form and what is not included as part of word formation. For example, the conceptual meaning would be the word "cat" on thinking of words, images, words, thoughts, and memories immediately become active to give the concept behind the three-letter word cat. These thoughts and memories are concepts through which we can understand the meaning of the word CAT: mammal, hairy, mustache, slender and fast, very flexible.

2. Connotative Meaning

Connotative meaning is the communicative value that an expression has by virtue of what it refers to, over and above its purely conceptual content. So, connotative meaning can be concluded as the meaning of the "real world" experience that someone associates with an expression when someone uses or hears it. For example, if someone says that the dog barks, the connotation is neutral.

3. Reflective Meaning

Reflective meaning is the meaning that appears in the case of multiple conceptual meanings when one meaning of a word is part of our response to another meaning. So that it can be concluded that the meaning reflected is the meaning that is formed from our response to another meaning. Sometimes, every meaning in the meaning that is reflected will become a taboo meaning. It occurs when the meaning of a word is connected with the psychology of sex. An example is shown by Bloomfield in replacing the word cock in the ranch yard with the word rooster.

4. Collocative Meaning

Collocative meaning is a meaning that consists of the associations that a word acquires because of the meanings of words that tend to appear in its environment.

5. Thematic Meaning

Thematic meaning is meaning refers to what is communicated by the way in which a speaker or writer organizes a message in terms of ordering focus and emphasis. Thus, active thinking is different from passive thinking, the conceptual meaning is the same. For example, the following statements in active and passive voice have the same conceptual meaning but different communicative values.

Examples of the differences: 1. Smith donated first prize. 2. The first gift was contributed by Mrs. blacksmith. In the first sentence "who gave the gift" is more important, but in the second sentence "what Mrs. Smith gave" is important.
