Decision: Major revisions required

The study highlights the importance of gender equality and gender mainstreaming in Indonesia. It aims to examine the newly framed labor regulations in Indonesia related to the right of paternity leave and investigate the need for regulating leave permits for husbands/ families to accompany women who give birth or experience a miscarriage . The study adopts a scientific approach using a normative juridical law research design . It emphasizes the influence of cultural and economic practices and gendered social structures on current paternity leave policies in Indonesia. Here are some suggestions for authors.

1. The abstract lacks a concise summary of the findings or results of the study. Including a brief statement about the key findings would provide readers with a better understanding of the contribution of the research.
2. The study should provide a clear introduction to the topic and set the research context. It must outline the key objectives , giving readers a brief understanding of what to expect from the research.
3. The study should also elaborate more upon important aspects such as gender equality, gender discrimination, and the benefits of paternity leave. It should highlight the current regulations in Indonesia and hints at the potential for legal renewal in the form of an extended paternity leave policy.
4. Additionally, the study could benefit from a clearer structure, separating the background information, research objectives, methodology, and key findings into distinct sections. This would enhance readability and make it easier for readers to grasp the main points of the study.
5. Furthermore, the study could provide more information on the significance of the research and its implications. It briefly mentions the need for legal provisions that are responsive to gender, but it does not elaborate on the study's broader societal or policy implications. Expanding on the potential impact of the research would make the study more engaging and relevant to a wider audience.

Decision: Major revisions required

This research article provides a decent overview of the study's aim and methodology. It could be improved by focusing on the following areas.

1. The article must provide details of the issues of marginalization and discrimination faced by women, the importance of paternity leave in achieving gender equality, and the legal instruments that protect gender mainstreaming.
2. Providing in-text citations for the sources referenced in the literature review is important. This helps readers to easily locate and verify the information. Including author names and publication years would be sufficient. A specific referencing style (e.g., APA, MLA) should be followed consistently throughout the literature review. This includes formatting in-text citations and providing a comprehensive list of references at the end.
3. While the literature review touches on the importance of gender equality for both men and women, it could be beneficial to explore and discuss potential challenges, criticisms, or limitations of paternity leave policies and gender mainstreaming efforts. Providing a balanced view will strengthen the review and address potential counterarguments.
4. The results provide a comprehensive overview of the international conventions and legal instruments that Indonesia has ratified to promote gender equality. It mentions important conventions such as the Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) and the International Labour Organization (ILO) conventions, which emphasize the elimination of discrimination against women and the promotion of equal rights. However, it should also discuss Presidential Instruction Number 9 of 2000, which emphasizes gender mainstreaming in national development and the establishment of the Ministry of Women's Empowerment. This shows the commitment of the Indonesian government to gender equality and the implementation of policies that promote gender mainstreaming.
5. The inclusion of the draft Law on Maternal and Child Welfare is another important requirement of the paper. It should highlight the proposed changes in maternity leave duration, paternity leave, and rights for mothers and children.
