Dear TPLS,

Firstly, we would like to express our gratitude for the publication of our article in TPLS last July, which has been successfully indexed by Scopus. However, we would like to kindly request the assistance of the TPLS editor in providing further clarification regarding the review of our article, which was categorized as a "minor revision."

In other words, could the TPLS editor please provide a detailed explanation as to why our article was categorized under minor revision?

We greatly require this explanation to fulfill administrative requirements at our institution.

Best regards
Agung Dian

Dear author,

Re: TPLS24-033001

We are surprised to get such an email of request, as this is the first email we've received in the journal's 14-year history (asking why a paper is accepted with minor revision).

Normally, there are four kinds of review results:

- Accept
- Accept with minor changes
- Accept with major changes
- Reject

As for your paper, it is an interesting paper. And it is well written and comprehensive. However, minor revisions are needed. Therefore, it was accepted with "minor changes".

Hope this is clear enough.
